Colonel Northam, Executive Officer, * * * Infantry, assumed command of the Third Battalion, * * * Infantry, on 11 August 1944, led his troops forward and made contact with a battalion that had been cut off by the enemy some hours earlier. He continued forward to the battalion objective, heavily wooded high ground near * * *, occupied by strong enemy forces in prepared positions. In the face of heavy enemy fire of all types and numerous enemy tanks, he led his battalion in a successful assault on the objective. Throughout the action, the superb leadership of Colonel Northam, his fearlessness, coolness, tenacity of purpose, and utter disregard for personal safety, served as an inspiration to the officers and men of his battalion. Entered United States Military Academy from Indiana.

Lieutenant Colonel John H Stowers, 0176135, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, France, on 11-12 August 1944. As Commanding Officer, First Battalion, * * * Infantry, Colonel Stowers led his unit in a wide flanking movement on enemy positions in the * * * Forest, involving a night march of five miles over unrecognizable trails, and requiring hand-carrying of all weapons. He moved his battalion with such skill and silence that when he ordered a dawn attack, the enemy was surprised and many were caught asleep in their prepared positions. After taking the objective he consolidated his positions and, despite heavy enemy artillery and mortar fire, repulsed all enemy counterattacks. The outstanding leadership of Colonel Stowers, his tenacity of purpose, and utter disregard for personal safety, enabled units in this area to clear the * * * Forest of the enemy much earlier than was anticipated, and reflects great credit upon his character as an officer and leader of men. After reorganizing his battalion, he led an assault that resulted in taking the objective on 12 August in the face of very strong enemy resistance, including tanks. He made contact with the isolated battalion, rendered medical aid and supplied such food as was available, and brought under American control all of the commanding high ground east of * * *. Throughout this action, Major Gillis, although himself wounded in the hand, accompanied leading elements of his battalion and inspired the troops under his command by his skillful leadership, tenacity of purpose, courage, coolness, positive action and utter disregard for personal safety. Entered United States Military Academy from Texas.

Captain Lawrence W Brady, 0152804, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in * * *, France, on 16 August 1944. Captain Brady, Regimental Intelligence Officer, together with another officer and two enlisted men, entered * * * soon after troops of his regiment had begun to occupy the city. While securing information of enemy strong points ahead of the leading elements of our troops, he heard heavy trucks nearby, investigated, and found remnants of the enemy undertaking to withdraw through the only remaining avenue of escape. Securing a light machine gun, he quickly set it up and opened fire upon the enemy troops less than 100 yards away. Despite enemy sniper and machine gun fire, he continued to fire until wounded by an enemy machine gun bullet. The courage, coolness, quick thinking and disregard for personal safety on the part of Captain Brady caused many casualties and much confusion among the enemy, and materially assisted in the capture of * * * by our forces. Entered military service from California.

Captain Francis S Greenleaf, 01291268, (then first lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Normandy, France, on 18 July 1944. During an attack on enemy strong points, Captain Greenleaf led his platoon aggressively and fearlessly in substantial advances against the enemy, and in repulsing strong counterattacks. Always well to the front of his platoon, he could be heard throughout the area shouting to his men and urging them forward. When an enemy machine gun suddenly opened fire, wounding several soldiers and killing four, Captain Greenleaf picked up a Browning Automatic Rifle from a wounded soldier, advanced alone on the enemy position and knocked it out, killing the entire crew. The dynamic leadership of Captain Greenleaf, his intrepid courage and utter disregard for personal safety inspired his men to their greatest efforts, and entitles Captain Greenleaf to a place of honor in the annals of fighting infantrymen. Entered military service from Nebraska.

Second Lieutenant Léo E Thomas, 01306768, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, France, on 9 August 1944. Lieutenant Thomas was in command of a weapons platoon and Acting Executive Officer for Company L, * * * Infantry, when it was surrounded by enemy forces and subjected to concentrations of enemy fire of all types. With complete disregard for personal safety, Lieutenant Thomas crossed a field under heavy enemy fire and established contact with a rifle platoon of his company, at the same time directing the fire of his own weapons platoon. He maintained liaison between the two platoons, enabling the company to consolidate its position and repulse the enemy counter-attack. The intrepid courage, skillful leadership, and disregard for personal safety on the part of Lieutenant Thomas reflects the highest credit upon the military service.
