I — SILVER STAR (Posthumous Awards). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded, posthumously, to the following officers:

Second Lieutenant Alexander Cameron, 01323910, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the * * * sector, Normandy, France, 15 July 1944. Lieutenant Cameron led the First Machine Gun Platoon, Company D, * * * Infantry, supporting the attack of Company A, * * * Infantry, in the operation against * * *. When the supported unit was pinned down by enemy machine gun fire, Lieutenant Cameron ordered his platoon to remain in its position and continue its fire at the enemy gun, while he went forward, armed with his carbine and a hand grenade, in an attempt to destroy the emplacement. Crawling to within grenade-throwing distance, Lieutenant Cameron was discovered by the enemy machine gun crew, who directed their fire at him. Springing to his feet, Lieutenant Cameron ran forward and threw his grenade, but at the time it destroyed the enemy gun, he was killed by the enemy machine gun fire. The intrepid actions of Lieutenant Cameron in placing the success of the mission at hand above that of his own life, constitute such gallantry in action as to reflect the highest credit upon his character as an officer and upon the military service. Entered military service from New York.

Second Lieutenant Ward Talcott, 01325117, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the * * * sector, Normandy, France, 13 July 1944. In the hedgerow fighting about * * *, the point of lead infantry moving forward to strengthen a lightly held position threatened by enemy infiltration, was subjected to intense enemy machine gun fire from a group of buildings. Lieutenant Talcott voluntarily led a reinforced squad around the flank of the buildings in an attempt to destroy the enemy guns, but while crossing hedgerows to reach his objective, other enemy machine guns opened fire, as a result of which he was mortally wounded. Lieutenant Talcott's inspiring courage and initiative are in accord with the highest traditions of the military service. Entered military service from Ohio.

II — SILVER STAR. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded to the following officers and enlisted men of this command:

First Lieutenant John Campbell Jr, 01325554, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the * * * River sector, France, 27 July 1944. When Company L, * * * Infantry, was unable to continue its advance because of fire from an enemy machine gun, Lieutenant Campbell, a platoon leader, sent a squad to the left flank of the enemy emplacement in an attempt to destroy it. Since the squad was unable to bring flanking fire upon the enemy emplacement, Lieutenant Campbell, armed only with hand grenades, crawled to the enemy's right flank where he threw two grenades which destroyed the gun, killed its crew and enabled Company L to continue its advance. The gallantry in action on the part of Lieutenant Campbell, his courage and zeal for the accomplishment of his unit's mission, reflect the highest credit upon his character as an officer and upon the military service. Entered military service from Illinois.

First Lieutenant Frank D Derouin, 026285, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, France, 22 August 1944. On his first day of leadership under enemy fire, Lieutenant Derouin was given the assignment of leading a combat patrol into the city of * * * with the mission of determining if the hospital therein was used as enemy headquarters, and to capture a German general supposedly there. Almost immediately, the patrol encountered enemy resistance, but Lieutenant Derouin went forward with a radio man, and although under enemy fire, directed his artillery fire so accurately, that the enemy was killed or dispersed. Continuing to advance with his men, Lieutenant Derouin and the patrol were pinned down by enemy machine gun fire, but by maintaining a calm disposition and complete control of his group, he was enabled to remove them to the cover of nearby woods. By proving himself an encouraging and inspiring leader, the members of his patrol advanced with him into the city, capturing two German officers and three enlisted men en route, and succeeding in locating the hospital, although no German general was found there. The leadership, devotion to duty and zeal for the accomplishment of his mission, reflect great credit upon Lieutenant Derouin and upon the military service. Entered military service from Washington, DC.

Sergeant Fred W Brown, 19055545, Field Artillery, United States Army, for gallantry in action on 18 July 1944 near * * *, Normandy, France. While serving voluntarily as a member of a field artillery forward observer party with front line elements of the * * * Infantry, Sergeant Brown observed the approach of an enemy force of approximately twenty-five soldiers, the leading elements of which group reached the opposite side of a hedgerow behind which the observer party was stationed. Without hesitation, on his own initiative, and without regard for his personal safety, Sergeant Brown mounted the hedge, shot the leading member of the enemy force with his pistol, and then leapt to the enemy side of the hedgerow, where he fired at the enemy until his pistol jammed, when he called for a carbine and continued to fire at the enemy although heavy machine gun and small arms fire were being directed at him during that time. Upon being ordered back to his own side of the hedgerow, Sergeant Brown obtained a heavy machine gun with which he continued to direct fire at the enemy. The gallant and inspiring action, initiative, and personal bravery of Sergeant Brown reflect credit upon the military service. Entered military service from Montana.

Sergeant Edward V Dalsoglio, 39680622 (then technician fifth grade), Field Artillery, United States Army, for gallantry in action on 18 July 1944 near * * *, Normandy, France. While serving voluntarily as a member of a field artillery forward observer party with front line elements of the * * * Infantry, Sergeant Dalsoglio witnessed the approach of an enemy force of approximately twenty-five soldiers, the leading elements of which reached the opposite side of the hedgerow behind which the observer party was stationed. Without hesitation, on his own initiative, and without regard for his personal safety, Sergeant Dalsoglio leapt across the hedge, fired his carbine against the enemy until he was out of ammunition, whereupon he called for another weapon and continued to fire aimed shots into the enemy although heavy machine gun and small arms fire were being directed against him. Upon being ordered back to his own side of the hedgerow, Sergeant Dalsoglio obtained a heavy machine gun with which he continued to direct fire against the enemy. The gallant and inspiring action, initiative and personal bravery of Sergeant Dalsoglio reflect credit upon the military service. Entered military service from Idaho.

Technician Fifth Grade Eugene F Tallman, 37550329 (then private first class), Medical Department, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the * * * sector, Normandy, France, 12 July 1944. Technician Tallman, a litter-bearer, Company B, * * * Medical Battalion, crawled to the aid of five wounded men who lay exposed to intense enemy fire of all types. Undaunted by the fact that he was practically buried by an enemy shell, Technician Tallman proceeded to bandage four wounded men while other shells struck close about him. He then crawled back to his lines with the fifth man who was more seriously wounded. Technician Tallman and his patient were then pinned down by enemy machine gun fire. He was unable to move until a smoke screen was laid, enabling him to complete the evacuation of the wounded soldier, and permitting the four men to whom he had administered first aid, to walk to safety. Technician Tallman's gallantry in action, his disregard for personal safety and devotion to duty, reflect credit upon his character as a soldier and upon the Medical Department of the Army. Entered military service from North Dakota.

III — BRONZE STAR MEDAL (Posthumous Award). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Bronze Star Medal is awarded, posthumously to the following enlisted man:

and machine gun action impeded the forward elements, surrounded the company and pinned down company headquarters personnel. Private Darling, and assistant squad leader, aided by another enlisted man, moved into an advantageous position and opened fire, causing the enemy to shift their fire upon him, as a result of which company headquarters personnel were enabled to withdraw to safety. The heroic action of Private Darling was responsible for sparing casualties in his unit and reflects credit upon his character as a soldier, and upon the military service. Entered military service from New Jersey.

Lieutenant Hanna led the First Platoon, Company C, * * * Infantry, and was advancing at the front of his men when he received a severe wrist wound. Despite loss of blood and an increasingly weakening condition, he refused evacuation and insisted upon first returning to his platoon, which was then being subjected to intense enemy fire of all types. Returning to the front lines, he withdrew the platoon, reorganized it, and only after having checked the situation thoroughly with his platoon sergeant, and assuring himself that he could do nothing further at that time would he permit himself to be evacuated. Lieutenant Winger, a platoon leader, led one of the platoons in the assault which consisted of three waves of five tanks each. During the operation, eleven of these tanks were immobilized, but disregarding the fact that the advance of his tank was under full enemy observation and subjected to intense enemy artillery and antitank fire, Lieutenant Winger proceeded on his mission and not only reached the objective, but pursued the enemy into the hills beyond. Having established an operations post in an area subjected to heavy enemy artillery fire from the opposite bank of the river, Lieutenant Webb remained at this dangerous position throughout the night, in order to call fire directions to his artillery unit. Lieutenant Webb's tenacity of purpose and devotion to duty resulted in the silencing of enemy artillery and materially contributed to the capture of the City of * * * .
