I -- SILVER STAR. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded, posthumously, to the following officers and enlisted men:

First Lieutenant Lawrence D Canatsey, 01303459, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Normandy, France on 15 July 1944. In the initial action which began the operation against * * *, Lieutenant Canatsey was in command of Company G, * * * Infantry. As his company began to move forward, Lieutenant Canatsey, who was at the head of his men, received a severe leg wound. Despite his pain, he refused immediate evacuation, and from where he lay upon the ground, he shouted words of encouragement to his men, urging them forward. He called his executive officer to him and oriented the latter upon the situation. Only after having assured himself that his organization would not be leaderless, did Lieutenant Canatsey consent to evacuation. While en route to the aid station, the vehicle in which he rode was subjected to enemy fire and Lieutenant Canatsey was killed. The gallant actions of Lieutenant Canatsey not only proved an inspiration to his men, but are in accord with the traditions of the military service. Entered military service from California.

First Lieutenant Joseph P McCrone, 01293990, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action at * * *, France on 11 November 1944. In its attack upon the village of * * * during a heavy downpour of rain, part of Company A, * * * Infantry, was pinned-down by intense enemy fire from houses at the edge of the village to the front of the attacking unit. Lieutenant McCrone, a platoon leader, went forward on personal reconnaissance and determined that the enemy's main harassing fire emanated from two machine gun emplacements on the left flank. He then returned and moved his platoon over two hundred yards of open, muddy terrain, to attack the enemy from the flank. Protected by the fire of his rifleman, Lieutenant McCrone boldly moved forward and accounted for one of the enemy machine gun emplacements in an inspiring action that led two of his men to silence the second emplacement. Lieutenant McCrone then reorganized his platoon and by means of another flanking movement, entered the village, advantageously placing his men while he again went forward on reconnaissance. As Lieutenant McCrone endeavored to force two Germans from the cellar of a house, he was killed by the fire of an enemy sniper. Lieutenant McCrone's courage, outstanding leadership, tactical skill, devotion to duty and disregard for personal safety, constitute such gallantry in action as to be in accord with the traditions of the military service. Entered military service from New Jersey.

Technical Sergeant Floyd H Kaechele, 20724764, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, France on 11 November 1944. Although presenting an easy target for snipers, and exposing themselves to heavy fire, Sergeant Kaechele and a companion left the cover of a building in * * *, rushed along a street for a distance of fifty yards and fired several rounds of bazooka ammunition into a Mark IV tank which was retarding the advance of a supporting company. This dashing act forced the German crew to abandon their tank and surrender to Sergeant Kaechele and his comrade. Sergeant Kaechele was killed in a later engagement. His outstanding display of resourcefulness and bravery is characteristic of the best traditions of the Army and honors his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Kansas.

Corporal Archie D Leeds, 20724768, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, France on 19 November 1944. During the attack on the village of * * * by elements of the * * * Infantry, their cannon company was called upon to deliver exceptionally close supporting fire. Corporal Leeds accompanied the forward observer to the foremost point in the advance and assisted in the establishment of an observation post. When telephone communication between this observation post and the forward gun positions were disrupted by enemy shelling, Corporal Leeds made his way through a heavy artillery barrage to a radio position, established contact with the cannon sections and directed the fire of his unit upon the enemy. He then returned to his observation post and continued to adjust the fire of supporting field artillery units. Corporal Leeds was killed in a later action. His intrepid bravery in the face of the most intense enemy artillery fire and unusual devotion to duty reflect high credit upon his character as a soldier and upon the military service. Entered military service from Kansas.

Technician Fifth Grade William F Smith, 39619420, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, France on 11 November 1944. In the assault against * * *, the terrain afforded the strategically placed enemy machine guns excellent fields of fire, so that Company A, * * * Infantry was pinned-down by the intense cross-fire of these enemy weapons. Acting upon his own initiative, Technician Smith, a rifleman, accompanied by a comrade, maneuvered himself to a position on the flank of one of these enemy machine gun emplacements and killed its crew. This gallant action, performed in the face of heavy enemy fire, enabled the company to continue upon its mission. Technician Smith was killed in a later action. His courage, devotion to duty, and zeal for the successful accomplishment of his unit's mission, are in accord with the high traditions of the military service. Entered military service from Montana.

Private First Class Marvin E Busse, 36260739, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, France on 11 November 1944. Although presenting an easy target for snipers, and exposing themselves to heavy fire, Private Busse and a companion left the cover of a building in * * *, rushed along a street for a distance of fifty yards and fired several rounds of bazooka ammunition into a Mark IV tank which was retarding the advance of a supporting company. This dashing act forced the German crew to abandon their tank and surrender to Private Busse and his comrade. Private Busse was killed in a later engagement. His outstanding display of resourcefulness and bravery is characteristic of the best traditions of the Army and honors his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Wisconsin.

Private Raymond W Parker, 36892553, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, France on 11 November 1944. In the assault against * * *, the terrain afforded the strategically placed enemy machine guns excellent fields of fire, so that Company A, * * * Infantry was pinned-down by the intense cross-fire of these enemy weapons. Acting upon his own initiative, Private Parker, a rifleman, accompanied by a comrade, maneuvered himself to a position on the flank of one of these enemy machine gun emplacements and killed its crew. This gallant action, performed in the face of heavy enemy fire, enabled the company to continue upon its mission. Private Parker was killed in a later action. His courage, devotion to duty, and zeal for the successful accomplishment of his unit's mission, are in accord with the high traditions of the military service. Entered military service from Michigan.

Private Dan Smith, 39217096, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, France on 30 September 1944. As Company G, * * * Infantry, moved forward to support the attack of another rifle company, its advance was impeded by fire from an enemy machine gun emplacement. Armed only with his rifle, Private Smith moved forward alone and engaged in a fire fight with the enemy, killing all members of the machine gun crew as well as six German riflemen protecting the position. His intrepidity, utter disregard for personal safety and his determination that the mission of his unit be successfully accomplished reflect credit upon the military service and entitle Private Smith to a permanent place in the annals of fighting infantrymen. Entered military service from California.

II -- SILVER STAR. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded to the following officers and enlisted men of this command:

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph D Alexander, 0300475, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 8 November 1944. During the successful attack against very determined enemy forces established in pill-boxes, bunkers, and reinforced basements of buildings before and in the town of * * * , Colonel Alexander, Commanding Officer of the Third Battalion, * * * Infantry, exhibited exceptional gallantry and intrepidity in leading his battalion to a successful conclusion of the action. In order to direct operations in the most effective manner possible, he chose for his battalion observation post a prominent point on the edge of the * * * Forest that was subjected to extremely heavy shelling throughout the attack by 88mm direct fire and 150mm artillery pieces. Despite the constant danger from bursting shells which inflicted heavy casualties, Colonel Alexander remained in this area and directed the action of his troops against the bitter resistance offered by the enemy. He maneuvered his units so skillfully that the town was entered by strong elements just prior to darkness. On the following morning, with the enemy still occupying a portion of the town, he mounted a passing tank and rode into the town to direct the completion of its capture, remaining with his troops until the enemy had been expelled or destroyed, and ninety-nine prisoners captured. These gallant and inspiring actions are such as to reflect high credit upon Colonel Alexander, his unit and the military service and are in keeping with the best traditions of the armed forces. Entered military service from Illinois.

Second Lieutenant Starr S Sutherland Jr, 0548198, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 18 November 1944. Lieutenant Sutherland led a patrol of Company E men into the woods near * * * , where he found scattered members of a Company G patrol. Forming the latter men as part of his patrol, Lieutenant Sutherland proceeded over open ground, discovered and destroyed an enemy machine gun and its crew. Later, while alone, and enroute to his operations post, he encountered and killed an enemy soldier, and upon arriving at his operations post, discovered an enemy tank firing on Company G. Lieutenant Sutherland then adjusted fire that neutralized the enemy vehicle. That same night, Lieutenant Sutherland and an enlisted man reconnoitered in preparation for an attack the following morning. The information obtained by Lieutenant Sutherland materially contributed to the success of the ensuing attack. Lieutenant Sutherland's aggressive leadership, tactical knowledge, personal bravery and devotion to duty, spell such gallantry in action as to be in accord with military tradition. Entered military service from Washington.

Staff Sergeant Bernard J Fellbaum, 37169252, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 13 November 1944. During the course of an attack against the enemy-held village of * * * , the attacking echelons, advancing over exposed terrain, were subjected to direct artillery and heavy machine gun fire, suffered numerous casualties, faltered and, when their leaders became casualties, started to withdraw. Sergeant Fellbaum, leader of a supporting squad, ran forward and reorganized the forward units under fire, combined them with his own squad, personally took the point of the attack, and called for a running attack on the town. Inspired by Sergeant Fellbaum's conspicuous gallantry, the men followed him into the town in defiance of the hail of enemy fire, over-ran the enemy positions, mopped up remaining enemy resistance in a house-to-house campaign, then established security positions. The intrepidity, dynamic leadership and utter disregard for personal safety on the part of Sergeant Fellbaum served to turn apparent defeat into a brilliant victory and reflects the highest credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from Minnesota.

Sergeant John E Schneider, 32797679, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, for gallantry in action at * * * , France on 8 December 1944. In the face of withering small arms fire, Sergeant Schneider, a squad leader, voluntarily and alone, raced across a partially completed foot bridge over the * * * River, and fastened anchor cables on the hostile shore. He then began stringing hand-rail ropes, and was wounded in the shoulder while so engaged. Despite this painful wound, and the fact that observed enemy fire had steadily increased in intensity, Sergeant Schneider coolly completed his mission before taking cover on the friendly shore. His intrepidity, coolness and zealous devotion to duty under fire served as an inspiration to the men of his unit and reflect the highest credit upon Sergeant Schneider's character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from New York.

Private First Class Barney D Summers, 38202768, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * * , France on 29 September 1944. When part of his company was pinned down by machine gun cross-fire during an enemy counterattack, Private Summers made his way to the flank of an infiltrating squad, killed its leader and put the remainder to flight, then directed his fire upon one of the machine gun nests and destroyed it. By his daring and resourceful action, Private Summers succeeded in killing nine of the enemy and relieving his company in a precarious situation. His gallant performance is in accord with the best traditions of the United States Army. Entered military service from Texas.

Private Raymond W Thorn, 35071877, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 20 November 1944. When an enemy shell exploded near his foxhole, wounding four of his comrades, Private Thorn went to their aid, dressed their wounds while exposed to heavy enemy machine gun and artillery fire, then carried each of them, in turn, to a covered position from which they could be readily evacuated. After accomplishing this task coolly and efficiently under enemy fire and observation, Private Thorn returned to his forward position where his unit was awaiting orders to attack. His gallant action under fire and without thought of personal safety reflects the highest credit upon Private Thorn's character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from West Virginia.

III -- SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, in addition to the Silver Star previously awarded, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster is awarded, posthumously, to the following officer:

First Lieutenant Frank D Derouin, 026285, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 13 November 1944. Lieutenant Derouin, a platoon leader, was wounded by sniper fire as he led his platoon through an orchard on the outskirts of the village of * * * against stubborn enemy resistance. Disregarding his wounds, he continued forward at the head of his men, directing their fire and movement, when he was struck two more times by enemy fire. Despite the fact that he was mortally wounded and unable to advance, he continued to shout orders and words of encouragement to his men who, inspired by the gallantry of their leader, pressed forward to seize the platoon objective. Lieutenant Derouin's intrepidity and dynamic leadership reflect credit upon his character as an officer and leader of men. Entered military service from Washington, DC.

IV -- SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, in addition to the Silver Star previously awarded, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster is awarded to the following officer and enlisted man:

First Lieutenant Charles W Bell, 0533411, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * * , France on 27 November 1944. Lieutenant Bell, commanding Company A, * * * Infantry, led an attack against the enemy in * * * . When they reached a swollen stream, he jumped into the chest-deep water and supervised construction of a foot bridge. He led his men skillfully and took the defending enemy tanks and foot troops by surprise. He personally directed placement of machine guns and rocket launchers, constantly exposing himself to enemy fire as he proceeded from building to building. After the enemy had been driven from the town, they counterattacked with tanks and armored vehicles, but were repulsed with heavy losses because of Lieutenant Bell's ingenious placement of weapons at strategic points in the town, and his prompt call for artillery support. As a result of Lieutenant Bell's aggressive leadership, tactical acumen, and complete disregard for his own safety, his company destroyed or damaged four enemy vehicles, killed twenty Germans and captured fifteen, without a single casualty and attained their objective ahead of schedule. Entered military service from Texas.

Private First Class J B Isbell, 34365985, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , France on 13 November 1944. During the course of an assault by Company G, * * * Infantry, on the village of * * * , the attacking echelons were subjected to accurate and intense sniper fire emanating from an orchard on the outskirts of the village. Private Isbell, a rifleman, voluntarily and without hesitation entered the orchard alone, killed three enemy snipers and captured seven Germans, thereby facilitating the advance and enabling his organization to accomplish its mission with minimum casualties. His gallant action is in accord with the high traditions of the Army. Entered military service from Tennessee.

First Lieutenant Victor J Martensen Jr, 01305915, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the * * * Sector, France on 8 and 9 August 1944. On 8 August the Second Battalion, * * * Infantry, moved into position to relieve pressure on another division. Lieutenant Martensen, Battalion S-2, went forward with the leading company. During that afternoon, although subjected to enemy fire of all types including direct fire from enemy tanks, Lieutenant Martensen, without regard for personal safety, moved among the front line companies, checking their security and coordination with adjacent units. He worked tirelessly throughout the night, and was killed by shell fragments on the morning of 9 August. Lieutenant Martensen's zealous devotion to duty reflects credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Louisiana.

First Lieutenant Charles W Rhine, 01324188, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, France on 26 November 1944. During the course of an attack against the enemy-held village of * * *, Lieutenant Rhine, a platoon leader, volunteered to enter the village for the purpose of reconnaissance. Accompanied by an enlisted man, Lieutenant Rhine made his way to the village, gained access to a house, and from a vantage point therein, observed a trench from which enemy forces were defending the village. Lieutenant Rhine and his companion directed effective fire of their company upon the enemy occupied trench, causing the enemy to withdraw from the trench and retreat through the town, whereupon Lieutenant Rhine and his companion moved out of the house and took up the pursuit, killing three Germans and capturing two others. His courage and resourcefulness reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Ohio.

Staff Sergeant Orion E Dunster, 42090160, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, France on 13 November 1944. During the operations against * * *, the platoon leader of the Third Platoon, Company G, * * * Infantry, became a casualty. Sergeant Dunster, a platoon sergeant, immediately assumed command of the platoon and advancing at the head of his men, successfully entered the village. Stubborn enemy resistance, marked by intense sniper fire, made it necessary that the platoon have adequate cover at once. As Sergeant Dunster made his way across a street in order to give protecting fire to his platoon while it sought cover, he was killed by enemy fire. Sergeant Dunster's leadership, courage and devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from New York.

Technician Fourth Grade Andrew E Anderson Jr, 36258283, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, France on 11 September 1944. While his unit was approaching the * * * River through dense forests and over muddy and treacherous trails, preparatory to a crossing, Technician Anderson, a radio operator, maintained the only communications available with higher headquarters, using a sixty-pound radio which he carried on his back. When the company was subjected to a very heavy artillery barrage upon reaching a bridge, Technician Anderson attempted to set up his radio to establish contact with the regimental command post, disregarding shells which were falling all around him. Failing in his attempt, he then led a group in evacuating casualties, although he was handicapped by the heavy apparatus he had to carry. After he had accomplished this mission, he started on his way toward the battalion observation post, which was located on a hill, but was killed by artillery fire before he could reach his objective. Technician Anderson's consistent bravery and devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as a soldier and upon the military service. Entered military service from Wisconsin.

Private First Class James Hill, 34193807, Cavalry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, France on 11 November 1944. When an enemy tank ditch impeded the progress of his platoon, which was engaged in a forward reconnaissance mission, Private Hill, together with two other members of his unit, voluntarily made his way ahead on foot to examine the surrounding area. As the group reached the tank ditch it observed the approach of an enemy patrol. Although armed only with sub-machine guns, the three men succeeded in killing all eight members of the German force, thus preventing the enemy from discovering the movements of our troops in this region, which might have caused them to strengthen their defenses and make our subsequent advance at this point much more difficult. Private Hill was killed in a later engagement. The fearless determination and resourceful action of Private Hill reflect credit upon his character and are in accord with the traditions of the Army. Entered military service from Tennessee.

Captain Jack H Hawk, 0367124, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, France on 14 November 1944. During the assault upon the village of * * *, enemy tanks situated on advantageous high ground, fired upon our troops moving against the village, and upon the observation post established well forward by Captain Hawk. In order to circumvent this, Captain Hawk personally reconnoitered for another route whereby he could move his heavy machine guns into more effective positions. Having established new emplacements, Captain Hawk designated fire missions for his weapons, and directed fire that proved so effective as to enable the troops to continue their advance. While so engaged, Captain Hawk was subjected to intense enemy fire, but despite this fact, remained at his position and continued to direct the mission of his company. Captain Hawk's leadership, coolness under fire and devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Kansas.

Captain James Lassiter, 01290769, Infantry, United States Army, for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, Normandy, France on 18 July 1944. Entered military service from Maine.

Captain Fred G Miller, 01300355 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near the Forest of * * *, France on 11 and 12 November 1944. When enemy infiltration had cut off his battalion from litter squads and needed supplies, Lieutenant Miller, battalion S-3, voluntarily and alone set out to reach the supply point. Forging his way through enemy patrols, and although constantly endangered by German small arms fire and ambush, he continued to his destination and then personally conducted a group carrying the necessary supplies back to the battalion, across the same perilous route. Lieutenant Miller's outstanding success on this hazardous mission enabled his unit to beat off the enemy attack and reflects credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from New York.

Captain Hubert H Stephens, 0387707, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, France on 20 November 1944. When his company suffered heavy casualties from concentrated enemy artillery and machine gun fire while spearheading an attack on * * *, Captain Stephens, Commanding Officer of Company K, * * * Infantry, exposed himself to the intense enemy fire and to hostile observation in order to reorganize his unit. While so engaged, he was severely wounded in his left arm by machine gun bullets. Although his arm was useless and bleeding, Captain Stephens refused evacuation, remained with his men and led them in a renewed attack on the village. As the company reached the edge of * * *, Captain Stephens had been so weakened by loss of blood that he was unable to continue his participation in the battle; yet he still did not permit himself to be evacuated until all other wounded personnel of his unit had been attended. Captain Stephens' exemplary leadership, determined devotion to duty and disregard for personal safety and comfort reflect credit upon his character as an officer and upon the military service. First Lieutenant Elwood F James, 01313896, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, France on 11 November 1944. When the commanding officer of Company I, * * * Infantry, was evacuated, Lieutenant James, although suffering from a severe case of trench foot, assumed command of the company, which had as its objective the town of * * *. Lieutenant James refused treatment for his condition, making his primary concern the mission at hand. Throughout the next day, in spite of his condition, Lieutenant James continued at the head of his men, and not until the mission of his company had been accomplished, did he permit himself to be treated, at which time he refused evacuation for further treatment and returned to his company. The example set by Lieutenant James in his fortitude, courage and disregard for personal welfare was an inspiration to the men of his command. Entered military service from Pennsylvania.

First Lieutenant George Krumholz, 01030684, Cavalry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, France on 11 November 1944. When an enemy tank ditch impeded the progress of his platoon, which was engaged in a forward reconnaissance mission, Lieutenant Krumholz, together with two other members of his unit, voluntarily made his way ahead on foot to examine the surrounding area. As the group reached the tank ditch it observed the approach of an enemy patrol. Although armed only with sub-machine guns, the three men succeeded in killing all eight members of the German force, thus preventing the enemy from discovering the movements of our troops in this region, which might have caused them to strengthen their defenses and made our subsequent advance at this point much more difficult. The fearless determination and resourceful action of Lieutenant Krumholz reflect credit upon his character and are in accord with the traditions of the Army. Entered military service from New York.

First Lieutenant Ernest E Oakes, 01323165, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, France on 20 November 1944. In order to protect American positions in the town of * * * against counter-attacks by enemy armor, Lieutenant Oakes and his platoon sergeant led a mine-laying detail from the Antitank Company, * * * Infantry, along a possible route of hostile approach. In spite of exceptionally heavy enemy fire and repeated German attempts to keep the group away from the vital road, Lieutenant Oakes and his unit were successful in laying a protective mine field, and in placing other barriers in strategic locations. So effective were these obstructions that when enemy armor attempted to recapture the town on the following day, several enemy tanks were destroyed as they struck the mine fields and the counter-thrust was repulsed. Lieutenant Oakes' courageous leadership, initiative and resourcefulness reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from New Jersey.

First Lieutenant Burton C Peterson, 01303774, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, France on 13 November 1944. As part of its action on 13 November, the Second Battalion, * * * Infantry, was assigned the mission of forcing withdrawal of the enemy from the right side of the village of * * *. Lieutenant Peterson, a platoon leader, led his men forward in the attack, advancing under the concentrations of artillery, tank and small arms fire directed at his group by the enemy from advantageous positions. While so engaged, Lieutenant Peterson was wounded, but without thought for his condition, continued to lead his men in the advance. As the platoon entered the outskirts of the village, Lieutenant Peterson collapsed from loss of blood and was evacuated. His courage, devotion to duty and tenacity of purpose so inspired the men of his platoon that they proceeded upon and successfully completed their mission. Entered military service from Michigan.

First Lieutenant Julius G Resnick, 01313449, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in * * * , France on 22 and 23 November 1944. Lieutenant Resnick, Executive Officer, Company L, * * * Infantry, was acting as a platoon leader in the attack against * * * . Over open terrain, and in the face of enemy tank, machine gun and small arms fire, Lieutenant Resnick maneuvered his platoon into the town, and was in the process of clearing the enemy from several buildings, when a strong enemy force supported by tanks, counterattacked in an attempt to force our troops from the town. Realizing that the enemy force was numerically superior, but knowing that enemy operations would be hampered by the black of night, Lieutenant Resnick skillfully hid his men about the town, rather than withdraw them. The following morning, Lieutenant Resnick regrouped his men and, assisted by an augmenting patrol, successfully routed the enemy from * * * . Lieutenant Resnick's leadership, tenacity of purpose and tactical acumen, make him an asset to his organization and to the military service. Entered military service from Ohio.

First Lieutenant Ben C Washburn, 01302559, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * and * * * , France on 26 and 27 November 1944. Lieutenant Washburn, Transportation Officer of the Second Battalion, * * * Infantry, personally reconnoitered a route to send supplies to attacking units in the villages * * * and * * * , as the only direct route into these villages was in enemy hands. Despite artillery and mortar fire, he succeeded in locating a suitable route, and on the night of 26 November he brought four vehicles to a point between the two villages, then directed the carrying of supplies by hand to each of the villages. The same procedure was followed the next night. Throughout this operation Lieutenant Washburn worked under heavy enemy fire, ensuring a constant flow of vital supplies to all companies at the front. His cool-headed resourcefulness and tireless devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Alabama.

Second Lieutenant Alick F C Greene Jr, 0537597, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 18 November 1944. Lieutenant Greene, a platoon leader, led his men forward against the enemy, until they were pinned down by small arms and artillery fire, and by fire from an enemy tank on the right flank. Any movement made by the platoon in attempting to dig in brought direct fire from the enemy tank. Without regard for personal safety, Lieutenant Greene exposed himself in order to ascertain the exact position of the tank, radioed the information to a forward artillery observer, and adjusted artillery fire which destroyed the enemy tank. By his courageous devotion to duty, tactical knowledge, and initiative under fire, Lieutenant Greene saved the lives of many of the members of his platoon, at the risk of his own life. Entered military service from Wyoming.

Second Lieutenant Noel D Hughes, 0887539, Medical Administrative Corps, United States Army, for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in France from 9 to 16 November 1944. Entered military service from Nebraska.

Second Lieutenant Paul L Post, 01018539, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 10 November 1944. Lieutenant Post, a tank platoon leader, led his platoon in support of the Second Battalion, * * * Infantry, in the assault upon * * * . An enemy road block had been established before the village, maintained by a number of enemy soldiers. In the soft, muddy terrain, the tanks soon were denied ease of movement, and the supported infantry element was pinned-down by intense enemy mortar and small arms fire. It was discovered that three American ambulances were trapped within * * * , and the situation became more poignant when six enemy tanks appeared. Upon receiving orders to take * * * within thirty minutes, Lieutenant Post moved his tank up to the road block, fired at the barricade and its personnel and, having directed the remainder of his tank platoon to fire upon the village, he rammed the road block and entered the village. As a result of his action, the enemy tanks fled the scene, two of the three ambulances were enabled to continue on their mission, and the infantry elements advanced into the village. In addition, the road block was destroyed and its personnel killed, wounded or dispersed. Lieutenant Post's tenacity of purpose, resourcefulness and devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Oklahoma.

First Sergeant James D Kennedy, 36077432, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , France on 8 November 1944. While exposed to intense enemy mortar, artillery and small arms fire, Sergeant Kennedy repeatedly made his way beyond his company's lines to rescue the wounded during a particularly heated engagement. On one of these missions, he was using his rifle in an improvised stretcher and was thus unarmed, yet with the assistance of a comrade, succeeded in capturing five of the enemy and in evacuating a casualty who had been left precariously close to the hostile lines. He then removed all the wounded men to a concealed position, continuing his task despite heavy shelling until the last man had been evacuated. Sergeant Kennedy's courageous actions and unselfish devotion to the men of his company reflect credit upon his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Illinois.

Technical Sergeant Franklin A Beller, 37120383, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , France on 20 November 1944. In order to protect American positions in the town of * * * against counterattacks by enemy armor, Sergeant Beller and his platoon leader led a mine-laying detail from the Antitank Company, * * * Infantry, along a possible route of hostile approach. In spite of exceptionally heavy enemy fire, and repeated German attempts to keep the group away from the vital road, Sergeant Beller and his unit were successful in laying a protective mine field, and in placing other barriers in strategic locations. So effective were these obstructions that when enemy armor attempted to recapture the town on the following day, several enemy tanks were destroyed as they struck the mine fields, and the counter-thrust was repulsed. Sergeant Eshbaugh volunteered to lead a combat patrol into the enemy-held village of * * * , with the mission of taking and holding a portion of the village. As the patrol neared the village, it encountered heavy enemy mortar and small arms fire. Without regard for his personal safety, Sergeant Eshbaugh skillfully maneuvered his troops through the field of fire and into the village, cleared the enemy from a portion of the village and set up defensive positions. When the enemy counter-attacked at dusk, Sergeant Eshbaugh directed his patrol's resistance and, when it became apparent that its position would be over-run, directed his troops to places of concealment. On the following morning he reorganized his patrol and began a house-to-house mopping-up of the village until joined by the main body of the company. Sergeant Eshbaugh's tactical acumen reflects credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from Pennsylvania.

Technical Sergeant Lester F Hahn, 37070636, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 13 November 1944. Sergeant Hahn, a platoon sergeant, led his platoon in a flanking movement against the strongly held village of * * * , skillfully deploying his men, and continuing in active command despite the fact that he was wounded in the arm by shell fragments. As a result of his outstanding leadership, the platoon seized the village with minimum casualties. Sergeant Hahn did not permit himself to be evacuated until his mission was accomplished, and until he had directed establishment of defensive positions in the village. His courage, outstanding leadership and disregard for personal welfare reflect credit upon his character and training as an infantryman. Entered military service from Washington, DC.

During the advance of his company, all but two men of the machine gun section of Company "G" became casualties. One of these men, Sergeant Lundberg, picked up a light machine gun and moved forward with the leading elements, thereby maintaining supporting fire for the assault against * * * and enabling the riflemen to reach the cover of a building at the edge of the village. The initiative, resourcefulness, courage and devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Lundberg reflect credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from Michigan.

Staff Sergeant John Bobko, 35528685, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 26 November 1944. Accompanied by his platoon leader, Sergeant Bobko made his way to the village, gained access to a house, and from a vantage point in the house observed a trench from which the enemy forces were defending the village. Sergeant Bobko and his companion directed effective fire of their company upon the enemy occupied trench, causing the enemy to withdraw from the trench and retreat through the town, whereupon Sergeant Bobko and his companion moved out of the house and took up the pursuit, killing three Germans and capturing two others. His courage and initiative reflect credit upon Sergeant Bobko's character as a soldier. Entered military service from Ohio.

As Company E, * * * Infantry, began a house-to-house mopping-up action in the village of * * * , Sergeant Kooker, a squad leader, took up a position at a window of a house near the only route of withdrawal, and commenced firing at the retreating Germans as they endeavored to escape from the village. Although his position was discovered and subjected to enemy rifle fire, Sergeant Kooker remained at his vantage point. While so engaged, he shot and killed an enemy rifleman who was at that moment aiming his weapon at Sergeant Kooker's commanding officer. His courage, resourcefulness and initiative reflect credit upon his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Pennsylvania.

On one occasion, 30 July 1944, when a platoon was isolated from the rest of the company by heavy artillery fire, Sergeant Salce voluntarily crossed a wide draw under heavy fire, to re-establish contact with his company commander. On 24 November 1944 he led a patrol into the town of * * * , wading through waist-deep water during hours of darkness, returning with information about a road block and enemy dispositions which proved of considerable value during a subsequent attack on the village. Sergeant Salce's courage, resourcefulness and initiative have been a constant source of inspiration to the members of his squad, and reflect credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from New York.

Staff Sergeant Robert B Welliver, 37070737, (then private first class) Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , France on 8 November 1944. With the assistance of another soldier, he then successfully evacuated the wounded man to an aid station. Sergeant Welliver's bravery and initiative were responsible for saving the life of a fellow soldier and are to the credit of the military service. Entered military service from Kansas.

Although he suffered from a severe case of trench foot and despite the fact that all but one of the non-commissioned officers in his machine gun section had become casualties, Sergeant Conzelmann, a machine gun squad leader, kept his weapons moving forward in order to cover the advance of the infantry. Refusing evacuation, Sergeant Conzelmann maintained complete control and operation of his machine gun section until the regimental objective had been taken, and remained on duty until he was evacuated on a litter. Seeing that a wounded officer was lying in an exposed position on the opposite side of the * * * Canal, and that several attempts by riflemen to reach him had been repulsed, Technician Justice, an aid man, voluntarily worked his way across a foot bridge subjected to machine gun fire and went to the aid of the officer. Because of the serious nature of the wounds, he decided that immediate evacuation was necessary, and persuaded two German aid men to assist in carrying the officer across the canal. As he was continuing his task of evacuating casualties, he discovered twenty-six enemy soldiers in the basement of a building, who surrendered to him and permitted him to dispose of their arms. He then started out for his unit with his prisoners when one of the Germans opened fire on him with a hidden burp gun. Believing that he saw movement inside this strong point, Private Anderson volunteered to go forward and investigate. As he neared the vicinity of the pillbox, he was subjected to enemy machine gun fire from a weapon located therein. He made his way back to our lines under heavy fire, with information which aided in the subsequent destruction of the enemy strong point. Private Archuleta, an automatic rifleman, observing that five members of the adjoining platoon, where the shell had struck, were wounded, traversed the interval between his own platoon and the point of the shell's impact, and administered first aid to the five wounded men, realizing that no medical aid personnel were available. Private First Class Tomas Glaspie, 39847577, Field Artillery, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 27 November 1944. When his unit was subjected to enemy artillery fire and all its personnel were ordered to seek cover, Private Glaspie sought the comparative safety of his foxhole. At that time a liaison plane discovered the enemy battery responsible for the shelling and called for fire upon it. Private Glaspie, a telephone operator, realizing that other batteries of his organization were countering the enemy fire, but that his own unit's guns were silent, realized that communications to his unit were broken. He thereupon left the safety of his foxhole and, while enemy artillery shells fell about him, traced the line of communication and made the necessary repair. Private Glaspie's intrepid action was a major factor in the silencing of the enemy battery. Entered military service from Arizona.

While so engaged he was wounded in the shoulder, but disregarding his condition, continued his efforts until the enemy had been routed. Private Linville's example of unselfish courage is worthy of high praise and reflects credit upon the military service. Entered military service from Tennessee.

Private First Class Jack E Page, 36869834, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France on 21 November 1944. Private Page, a company runner, was wounded by shell fragments during the course of an attack against strong enemy forces in the village of * * * . Although directed to go to the rear for treatment, Private Page elected to continue his hazardous duties and made at least three more trips to the front under heavy concentrations of enemy fire and under enemy observation. He did not permit himself to be evacuated until the enemy had been driven from the village. His courage, tenacity of purpose and commendable devotion to duty are in keeping with the military traditions of the United States. Entered military service from Michigan.

Private First Class Sydney Weissman, 32901167, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * * , France from 20 to 22 November 1944. Private Weissman, operator of a portable radio for his company, was continually at the side of his company commander during the operation in the vicinity of * * * . Displaying outstanding devotion to duty and tenacity of purpose, as well as disregard for personal safety, Private Weissman kept his radio in operation so that his company commander was enabled to maintain contact with the battalion commander. On one occasion, he was pinned down in the mud by enemy machine gun fire for three hours; on another occasion, he was fired upon by enemy 88mm tank guns in an effort to destroy his radio. Private Weissman has shown himself to be an asset to his organization. Entered military service from New York.

Private Ambrose N Manning, 14157087, Medical Department, United States Army, for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , France on 22 November 1944. Entered military service from North Carolina.

Private Harry S Smith, 31319613, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States at * * * , France on 4 December 1944. Private Smith, a rifleman, was engaged in clearing the enemy from * * * , when the enemy occupying four houses within the town, opened fire with machine guns, machine pistols and small arms. When Private Smith's platoon sergeant and platoon guide called for rifle grenades, Private Smith obtained them, although so doing necessitated his crossing open ground under the enemy fire. When the platoon guide attempted to fire a grenade into one of the houses, the angle of fire proved too sharp, whereupon Private Smith volunteered to take the grenades to a more advantageously situated soldier farther along the street. This again caused him to traverse open ground under enemy fire. He thereafter made a similar trip to obtain a new gas cylinder plug for a comrades rifle. Private Smith then fired a grenade into one of the houses and when three of the enemy attempted to escape, they were killed by American troops. Private Smith's resourcefulness and devotion to duty reflect credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from Maine.
