I -- SILVER STAR. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded, posthumously, to the following enlisted man:

Corporal Edward L Brannon, 14024794, Field Artillery, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Belgium on 29 December 1944. Corporal Brannon was returning from a foot reconnaissance of the immediate area when he saw that his tank destroyer had been hit by direct fire from an enemy tank located in a concealed position. Ammunition was exploding, setting the tank destroyer on fire and wounding three members of the crew who were inside the vehicle. Two of the men were able to extricate themselves from the tank destroyer, but a third man could not get out. Hearing frantic calls for help from this soldier, Corporal Brannon voluntarily and with utter disregard for his personal safety rushed across a hundred and fifty yards of exposed terrain through heavy enemy tank fire and amidst exploding ammunition to the flaming vehicle. With the aid of another soldier, he succeeded in lifting his wounded comrade to the ground. As the group was preparing to return to safer positions, renewed fire from the enemy tank killed Corporal Brannon and his wounded companion, and seriously wounded the remaining member of the crew who had sought to aid in the rescue. Corporal Brannon's intrepid actions, zealous devotion to duty, and loyalty to a wounded comrade even at the sacrifice of his own life, served as an inspiration to his fellow-soldiers and reflect high credit upon the military service. Entered military service from Georgia.

II -- SILVER STAR. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Silver Star is awarded to the following officers and enlisted men of this command:

Captain Norman C Carey, 01285008, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * *, Germany on 18 and 19 December 1944. The First Battalion, * * * Infantry, was ordered to attack the town of * * * on the night of 18 December, without prior reconnaissance of the ground, and Company A, commanded by Captain Carey, was given the mission of moving into the town by following a route along the * * * River on the right flank of the other two attacking companies. About 300 yards from * * *, heavy enemy fire from emplacements in the outskirts of the town forced the attacking companies to defiladed positions. Captain Carey held his unit in position, personally reconnoitered a route, and led his company through the enemy lines and into the town, skillfully avoiding enemy patrols known to be operating in the area. Strong enemy resistance was encountered at the outskirts, and Captain Carey led his troops in fierce hand-to-hand fighting which forced an enemy withdrawal, then established positions in buildings from which the enemy had been driven. He then sent guides to the other two companies of the battalion to lead them into the town by the same route. On the following morning, Captain Carey led his troops in house-to-house street fighting until enemy resistance was overcome and the town captured. His intrepid leadership, keen tactical knowledge, and disregard for personal safety are in accord with military traditions of the United States. Entered military service from Ohio.

First Lieutenant John E Davis, 01307520, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * and * * *, Belgium on 30 December 1944. En route to * * *, with the mission of supporting the Third Battalion, * * * Infantry, which was being sharply counterattacked, Company E was subjected to intense enemy fire from strong German forces, and surrounded. After the commanding officer and all other platoon leaders had become casualties, Lieutenant Davis assumed command, promptly reorganized the company, worked out a plan of action, then led his troops to their original position in the second battalion area, killing forty Germans and capturing seven. He then co-ordinated the action of his company with an adjoining company, in maintaining the original defensive line against repeated German attacks. Lieutenant Davis' intrepidity and cool-headed action under adverse circumstances reflect credit upon his character as an officer. Entered military service from Nebraska.

Staff Sergeant Bill Brock, 6970105, Field Artillery, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Belgium on 29 December 1944. Sergeant Brock was returning from a foot reconnaissance of the immediate area when he saw that his tank destroyer had been hit by direct fire from an enemy tank located in a concealed position. Ammunition was exploding, setting the tank destroyer on fire and wounding three members of the crew who were inside the vehicle. Two of the men were able to extricate themselves from the tank destroyer, but a third man could not get out. Hearing frantic calls for help from this soldier, Sergeant Brock voluntarily and with utter disregard for his personal safety rushed across a hundred and fifty yards of exposed terrain through heavy enemy tank fire and amidst exploding ammunition to the flaming vehicle. With the aid of another soldier, he succeeded in lifting his wounded comrade to the ground. As the group was preparing to return to safer positions, renewed fire from the enemy tank seriously wounded Sergeant Brock and killed his two companions. Sergeant Brock's intrepid actions, zealous devotion to duty, and loyalty to a wounded comrade at great risk to his own life, reflect credit upon his character as a soldier and are in accord with the best traditions of the Army. Entered military service from Alabama.

Sergeant Charles Kovacs, 32607781, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Belgium on 4 January 1945. Sergeant Kovacs was a member of a seven-man detail which was to follow an attacking rifle company with the mission of clearing a vital road junction of mines and laying a defensive mine field to prevent recapture of the cross-roads by the enemy. As the men were carefully advancing along the road, they were subjected to withering fire from a well-camouflaged enemy machine gun that had been by-passed by the rifle units. While his comrades directed intense fire against the German position, Sergeant Kovacs stealthily maneuvered his way through underbrush and under a hail of fire to within ten yards of the hostile emplacement, and hurled a grenade which destroyed the enemy weapon as well as its crew. He then rejoined his companions and assisted in the successful accomplishment of the group's mission, braving heavy German artillery and mortar fire under constant enemy observation. Sergeant Kovacs' daring and resourceful actions were a vital factor in the success of his unit and are in accord with the finest traditions of the United States Army. Entered military service from New Jersey.

Private First Class Charles A Post, 37034181, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * *, Belgium on 10 January 1945. On 10 January, as Private Post, an ammunition handler, was guarding an ammunition dump for his unit in an area subjected to sporadic enemy artillery and rocket fire, an enemy shell exploded in an adjoining ammunition dump of the * * * Airborne Division, setting fire to a box containing mortar ammunition. Without hesitation, Private Post entered the dump and started to remove the flaming box. While so engaged, one of the shells in the box exploded, burning him severely about the hands and face. In addition, one of his fingers was blown off, and he was wounded by shell fragments. Despite his extremely painful wounds, and the fact that enemy fire was still falling in the area, he removed the box to a point where it no longer endangered the ammunition dump or personnel, then returned to the dump to make sure that no fire remained before permitting himself to be evacuated for medical treatment. Private Post's gallant actions reflect the highest credit upon his character as a soldier. Entered military service from Nebraska.

Private First Class Earnest Q Staley, 35075198, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * * , Luxembourg on 4 January 1945. As his unit advanced against strong enemy opposition, Private Staley, a scout, voluntarily and on his own initiative moved well ahead of his squad and into a thicket from which enemy machine gun and small arms fire was emanating. Firing his Browning Automatic Rifle with deadly effect, Private Staley moved doggedly forward. The twenty Germans occupying the thicket, amazed by the intrepidity of the American soldier, promptly surrendered. By his gallant action, Private Staley eliminated one of the strongest pockets of enemy resistance in the path of his unit's advance and inspired his comrades-in-arms to move on to their objective. Entered military service from West Virginia.

III -- SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, in addition to the Silver Star previously awarded, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster is awarded to the following officer and enlisted man of this command:

First Lieutenant Glen Mooney, 01307057, Infantry, United States Army, for gallantry in action near * * * , Luxembourg on 5 January 1945. During the course of an attack against strongly held enemy positions near * * * , the advance of Lieutenant Mooney's platoon was halted by heavy enemy fire of all types. Realizing the necessity of eliminating a particularly troublesome enemy machine gun position before further advances could be made, Lieutenant Mooney formulated a plan for a flanking assault on the enemy emplacement, moved among his troops under enemy observation to explain the plan of attack, then led an assault which succeeded in over-running the enemy position, destroying the machine gun, killing two and capturing the remaining twelve Germans. Lieutenant Mooney was wounded by rifle fire during the assault. Lieutenant Mooney's tactical acumen, initiative, and dynamic leadership inspired his troops and resulted in the reduction of an enemy strong point, thereby contributing to the eventual rout of all enemy forces in this area. Entered military service from Missouri.

Technician Fourth Grade Alvin E Snead, 39392645, Medical Department, United States Army, for gallantry in action in the vicinity of * * * , Belgium on 29 December 1944. While serving as an aid man with a heavy machine gun platoon of Company M, * * * Infantry, Technician Snead assisted in removing a wounded soldier from a tank destroyer which had been hit by enemy tank fire. He succeeded in getting the soldier out of the tank destroyer just as that vehicle burst into flames. While administering first aid to this soldier, a second tank destroyer in the vicinity was hit by enemy fire. Without thought of personal safety and under a hail of enemy machine gun fire, Technician Snead made his way to the tank destroyer, succeeded in rescuing a seriously wounded soldier therefrom, and carried him to safety. As he returned for the other occupants of the tank destroyer, it burst into flames and he was seriously wounded by exploding ammunition. Technician Snead's intrepidity and coolness under fire resulted in saving the lives of two of his comrades-in-arms. Entered military service from California.

IV -- BRONZE STAR MEDAL. Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, a Bronze Star Medal is awarded, posthumously, to the following enlisted man:

Private First Class Francis J Engelbert, 37731625, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , Belgium on 4 January 1945. Private Engelbert was a member of a seven-man group which was to follow an attacking rifle company with the mission of clearing a vital road junction of mines and of laying a defensive mine field in order to prevent recapture of the cross-roads by the enemy. As the men were carefully advancing along the road, they were subjected to withering fire by a well-camouflaged enemy machine gun which had been by-passed by the rifle unit. Private Engelbert and several of his comrades immediately directed intense fire against the German position, allowing another member of the group to outflank the machine gun emplacement and destroy it with a hand grenade. Braving heavy artillery and mortar fire, and although forced to work under constant enemy observation, the men then proceeded on their mission, swept the road of enemy mines, and constructed a defensive mine field. After their task had been completed, Private Engelbert and his companions assisted in evacuating casualties of the rifle company on improvised litters before returning to their unit. Private Engelbert was killed by enemy artillery fire while making his way to the battalion command post. Private Engelbert's courage, resourcefulness and unusual zeal reflect credit upon his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Kansas.

First Lieutenant George M Kryder Jr, 0479715, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * * , France on 8 December 1944. On 8 December, Company I, * * * Infantry, was ordered to make a night crossing of the * * * River and enter the city of * * * on the opposite shore, as part of the third battalion action. After making a personal reconaissance of the crossing site, Lieutenant Kryder, commanding Company I, moved at the head of his men toward the river, urging his men forward. Although the company's left flank was left exposed when a supporting company was engaged in a determined fire fight by the enemy, Lieutenant Kryder led his unit in an advance through three thousand yards of prepared enemy positions, captured fifty prisoners and finally entered * * * . Enemy fire was so heavy in the city that evacuation of wounded and prisoners proved impossible. Quickly appraising the situation, Lieutenant Kryder set up an aid station in a captured building with the assistance of his aid men and other soldiers who had had some medical training, undoubtedly saving numerous lives that might have been lost if no immediate treatment had been available. He also established a prisoner of war cage and assembled all civilians in one section of the town, screening them for persons thought to be favoring the enemy. This action greatly contributed to the elimination of sniper fire within the city. Lieutenant Kryder's aggressive and resourceful leadership was a vital factor in the success of his battalion and reflects credit upon his character and training as an officer. Entered military service from Michigan.

As the men were carefully advancing along the road, they were subjected to withering fire by a well-camouflaged enemy machine gun which had been by-passed by the rifle unit. Sergeant Belcher and several of his comrades immediately directed intense fire against the German position, allowing another member of the group to outflank the machine gun emplacement and destroy it with a hand grenade. Praying heavy artillery and mortar fire, and although forced to work under constant enemy observation, the men then proceeded on their mission, swept the road of enemy mines, and constructed a defensive mine field. After their task had been completed, Sergeant Belcher and his companions assisted in evacuating casualties of the rifle company on improvised litters before returning to their unit. Sergeant Belcher's courage, resourcefulness and unusual zeal reflect credit upon his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from West Virginia.

During the course of a sharp enemy counterattack which necessitated a limited withdrawal by riflemen in position on the ridge of a hill near * * * , Private Warren, a machine gunner, stood fast. The enemy placed smoke and artillery fire in the area in support of their attack, and Private Warren was wounded by fragments from a smoke shell. He calmly treated his own wounds, then continued to operate his weapon, placing a steady stream of harassing fire among the German troops and materially contributing to the success of his company in repulsing the counterattack and regaining the lost ground. VI -- BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER). Pursuant to authority contained in AR 600-45, dated 22 September 1943, as amended, and Circular 6, Headquarters Third United States Army, 26 April 1944, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal previously awarded, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster is awarded to the following officer and enlisted men of this command:

First Lieutenant Donald F Barraclough, 01306193, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, Belgium on 29 December 1944. As Lieutenant Barraclough, a platoon leader, moved forward on a reconnaissance to determine the best locations for his antitank guns, a heavy enemy artillery barrage seriously wounded an enlisted man accompanying him. Lieutenant Barraclough dragged the wounded man to the comparative safety of a shallow ditch. While so engaged, he was himself wounded by shell fragments. Disregarding his own condition, he made his way about a mile across country to obtain a vehicle and aid men from an adjoining unit, returned and evacuated the wounded soldier. Lieutenant Barraclough then went forward and completed his reconnaissance before permitting his own wounds to be treated. His actions are in accord with the traditions of the military service. Entered military service from Nebraska.

Sergeant Burwell C Mellum, 39384633, Infantry, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States near * * *, Germany on 18 December 1944. The men hand-carried twenty mines through a dense woods and across exposed terrain and, in spite of heavy enemy mortar and small arms fire, succeeded in placing them at strategic points. As the group was returning from its mission, a mortar shell burst seriously wounded Sergeant Mellum and one of his comrades, and rendered the two remaining members of the crew unconscious. Although wounded in the leg by a shell fragment, Sergeant Mellum reached the position of the two unconscious men and revived them. By assisting each other, all the members of the group were finally able to reach friendly lines. Sergeant Mellum's courageous leadership, devotion to duty and loyalty to his comrades reflect credit upon his character and training as a soldier. Entered military service from Washington.

Technician Fifth Grade Arthur I Martin, 39609839, Medical Department, United States Army, for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in the vicinity of * * *, Belgium on 30 December 1944. Technician Martin, an aid man, accompanied forward elements of the Second Battalion, * * * Infantry, heavily engaged with the enemy near * * *. He administered first aid to the wounded and directed their evacuation, performing his duties calmly and efficiently despite the concentrations of enemy fire falling in the area. When a litter squad failed to return from an assigned mission, Technician Martin voluntarily undertook to search for them. Braving machine gun and mortar fire, he persisted in his search until he located the missing squad, three members of which had been seriously wounded. He administered first aid and personally evacuated two of the wounded men. He continued to perform his duties on the field of battle, evacuating seven more wounded soldiers before the battle was concluded. His courage, initiative and zealous devotion to duty were responsible for saving the lives of many of his comrades and reflect the highest credit upon himself and upon the Medical Department of the Army. Entered military service from Montana.
